Edward Snow has now improved upon the translations for which he received the Harold Morton Landon Translation Award and with which he began his twenty-year project of translating Rilke. Together they constitute a meaning-intention.

It is open as symbols and metaphors for something in between the form of the poem. What takes form then, after time spent with contemplation, is, Der Panther. It is then fair to ask, if the image that was taken in and frantically rushed to the heart merely ceased to be, or if it simply was usurped and lost within the largeness of the heart. Not a big fan of Rilke in English, but Edward Snow pulls off this translation. It cage. As he wrote several years later in the first of his 'Duino Elegies': 'Isn't it time that we lovingly freed ourselves from the beloved and, quivering, endured?'
