In me thou see'st the glowing of such fire That on the ashes of his youth doth lie, As the death-bed whereon it must expire Consum'd with that which it was nourish'd by. Now we're getting into, you know, that whole metaphor business. Perhaps the most famous line featuring ruin is from Julius Caesar, when Antony speaks over Caesar's corpse: Thou art the ruins of the noblest man That ever lived in the tide of times.

Quimealitmeextinguit. Some scholars suggest that this metaphor was deliberately chosen for its imagery of barrenness where there once was growth, a possible allusion to Shakespeare's incipient baldness.
