Renoir himself had been the product of a gloriously unfettered childhood and had fought with distinction as a young man in World War I. Some claim that part of the footage was lost; others say that Renoir, who was working on a very small budget and often improvised, never had the money to film the entire script. Alone with her in the first floor den, the middle-aged detective wanders the room with the innocent look of a visiting older relative. Color:BlackandWhite.
