Local workers breeze in, flash a phone, grab their prepackaged almond lime bowls and breeze. In addition to his work on urban networks, he also co-directs the Michigan School Program Information MiSPI project which aims to use networks to increase the use of evidence in decision making in public schools. Mobility creates parts of the cityscape, for example, if we change our mobility habits we could have more urban green space, when parking areas become parks.

You need to know the impact of Mobility as a Service for your individual use cases. Join us at this two-hour event for an opportunity to hear future mobility expert Tim Papandreou speak on new modes and services, and the need to prepare to plan, operate and manage new mobility in radically different ways. At other times, they will use the same devices for more public acts. Future Mobility is the central congress of mobility decision makers from politics, business, science, associations, NGOs and trade unions.
