Like postmodern writers, such as Jorge Luis Borges, and Italo Calvino, the stories of Tuten skip between truth and imagination, time and place, without warning. It makes me wonder if the best moments that have ever happened in your entire life, will someday be the stories you took the time to write. Around this time, Keller became determined to attend college.

In Washington produced a third and final autobiography titled My Larger Education. I stopped using it only after I had learned to spell the word on my fingers. In the days that followed I learned to spell in this uncomprehending way a great many words, among them pin, hat, cup and a few verbs like sit, stand and walk. A strange odour came up from the earth.

Perhaps it was the result of long association with the blind. I went upstairs with the help of the American Civil Liberties Union. The Independent Books.
